SUMMARY

The chance of surviving a drug overdose is dependent on how quickly one receives medical assistance.¹ However, research indicates that there is often a reluctance among those witnessing an overdose to summon emergency assistance from law enforcement or other first responders out of fear of arrest for drug possession or other charges.² In an effort to reduce this fear and to encourage overdose witnesses to seek help, state policymakers developed Good Samaritan laws specific to drug overdoses (hereafter called “Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention laws”).³ The purpose of these laws is to prioritize the overdose victim’s safety over arresting drug users by granting limited protection from criminal liability to people seeking medical assistance and, in most cases, to the overdose victim. New Mexico enacted the first Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention law in 2007.

In 2020, the Legislative Analysis and Public Policy Association (LAPPA) undertook an extensive research project to determine the status of Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention laws throughout the United States, including the District of Columbia and all U.S. territories. LAPPA updated the document in 2021 and 2022. As of December 2022, 48 states and the District of Columbia have Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention laws. Only Kansas and Wyoming do not have such laws. Additionally, none of the other U.S. territories has a Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention law in place.

The results of this research project are presented in this document. Starting on page 16, LAPPA provides jurisdiction-by-jurisdiction tables describing many aspects of each Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention law currently in effect. The detailed aspects of these laws include:

- Statutory citation;
- Initial effective date;
- Date and content of subsequent substantive amendment(s) (if any);
- Individual(s) eligible for the Good Samaritan protection;
- Protections afforded as to crimes related to: (1) controlled substance possession; (2) drug paraphernalia; and (3) other violations;
- Requirements for the protections to apply and exceptions to protection;
- Whether reporting an overdose can serve as a mitigating factor for crimes not subject to the protection, and if so, which types of crimes;
- Other provisions of note; and
- Relevant legislation introduced, but not enacted, in 2021 or 2022.

In addition to detailing Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention laws, as part of this project, LAPPA researched the status of drug-induced homicide/drug delivery resulting in death laws (hereafter called “DIH/DDRD laws”). DIH/DDRD refers to types of laws that establish a specific criminal charge, often manslaughter or murder, for individuals who furnish or deliver controlled substances to another individual who dies as a result.⁴ Reports suggest that DIH/DDRD prosecutions are on the rise in recent years, in response to the continuing drug overdose crisis in the country.⁵ Certainly, there is tension between Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention and DIH/DDRD laws. An ongoing policy debate exists about whether the use, or potential use, of DIH/DDRD laws against those who might report an overdose negates the encouragement to report such an incident provided by Good Samaritan protections. The jurisdiction-by-jurisdiction tables in this document provide details about the following aspects of DIH/DDRD laws:

- Statutory citation(s);
- Effective date and last amendment;
- Classification of offense;
- Circumstances when law applies;
- Whether a specified affirmative defense exists; and
- Relevant legislation introduced, but not enacted, in 2021 or 2022.

LAPPA designed this document to: (1) provide a singular resource for each jurisdiction's laws; (2) allow for a comparison of these laws between jurisdictions; and (3) identify and highlight interesting provisions. The primary conclusions from the research and analysis are set forth below, followed by several maps showing many of the results in graphic form (Figures 1 to 11).⁶

- The enactment of Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention laws is a recent phenomenon. Over half of the existing 49 laws in effect in the United States first took effect on or after January 1, 2015.
- Twenty-one jurisdictions substantively amended their Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention laws one or more times since initial enactment, largely to expand the protection afforded to eligible individuals. The first substantive amendments took place in 2014, and the latest in 2022. These 21 jurisdictions are (in alphabetical order): Colorado, Connecticut, the District of Columbia, Florida, Illinois, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, and Wisconsin.⁷

⁷ In Wisconsin's case, a sunset provision effective August 1, 2020, repealed additional protections added to the law in 2017.

- The nature of the protection provided by Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention laws differs by jurisdiction. This analysis groups the protections afforded into three categories of crimes: (1) possession of controlled substances; (2) possession of drug paraphernalia; and (3) other violations.
- All Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention laws provide some level of protection for low-level drug possession offenses. In all but three states, an eligible person is explicitly protected against one or more of the arrest, charge, prosecution, or conviction of the drug possession offense(s). The three exceptions are Iowa, Texas, and Utah. In Texas and Utah, the statute provides an affirmative defense to an allegation of violation.⁸ In Iowa, the statute precludes the use of certain information gathered in response to a call for medical assistance to be used to support probable cause or be admitted into evidence. Each of the remaining 46 jurisdictions explicitly provide protection against prosecution, with some variation in how that is expressed in language. Slightly over half of the jurisdictions with laws (25 states and the District of Columbia) explicitly provide protection against arrest or being taken into custody. See the map below for a visual representation. Five states (Colorado, Florida, Illinois, Louisiana,⁹ and Virginia) added protection from arrest to their originally enacted laws by amendment.

Good Samaritan Fatal Overdose Prevention Laws:
Type of Protections from Drug Possession Offense(s)

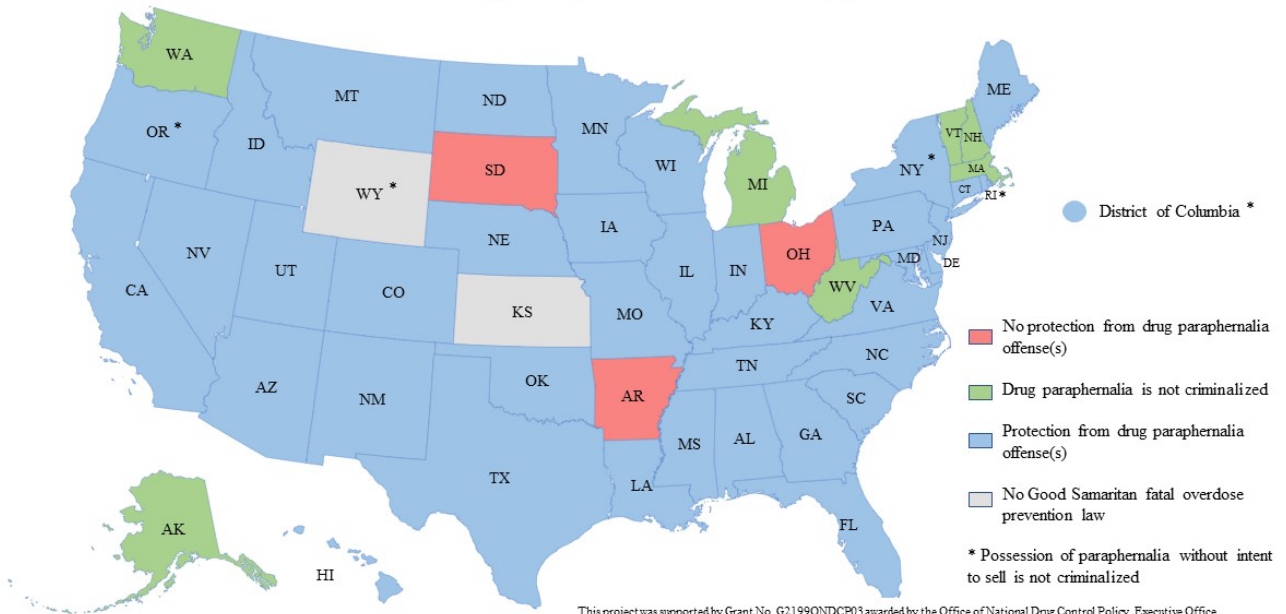

⁸ As originally enacted in 2015, Virginia's law provided an affirmative defense. Virginia law now provides protection from arrest or prosecution.

⁹ Louisiana law only protects the individual experiencing the overdose from arrest and not the person seeking help.

- In most cases, the nature of the protection provided to an eligible person under the jurisdiction’s Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention law extends to possession of drug paraphernalia. In 38 states and the District of Columbia, the law expressly includes drug paraphernalia offenses within the protection. This includes three states (New York, Oregon, and Rhode Island) and the District of Columbia where the possession of drug paraphernalia, without the intent to deliver or sell, is not criminalized. In seven states (Alaska, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, Vermont, West Virginia, and Washington), although the Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention law does not extend protection to possession of drug paraphernalia, possession without the intent to sell is not criminalized. In contrast, there are three states that do criminalize possession of drug paraphernalia without the intent to sell that do not extend Good Samaritan protections to such possession (Arkansas, Ohio, and South Dakota). Four states (Florida, Illinois, Louisiana, and New Mexico) added protection against drug paraphernalia offenses to the originally enacted law by amendment. The map below provides a visual representation. For more information of state drug paraphernalia laws, see LAPP’s publication Drug Paraphernalia: Summary of State Laws.

- Some Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention laws provide broader protections for eligible individuals than just possession of drugs and drug paraphernalia. The most common of these additional protections are for probation and parole violations (26 states and the District of Columbia), certain underage alcohol offenses (13 states and the District of Columbia), and violations of protective orders (10 states). The maps below provide a visual representation.

- In two states (Ohio and West Virginia),¹¹ there are specific treatment requirements that the eligible individual must meet to receive protection from the Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention law. In two states (Kentucky and Missouri), there are no treatment requirements for protection, but the law requires, when possible, that treatment information be provided to the eligible individual. The map below provides a visual representation.

¹¹ Wisconsin previously had a treatment requirement, but it was repealed on August 1, 2020.

- Several state laws contain exceptions to protection. Six states (Iowa, Ohio, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, and Texas) place limits on the number of times a person can receive protection under the Good Samaritan fatal overdose prevention law. See the map below for a visual representation. A total of 29 states and the District of Columbia explicitly specify in their laws that immunity for covered offenses is not grounds for suppression of evidence of other crimes. This lack of such a specification does not mean that evidence of other crimes is subject to suppression in the remaining states; rather, only those states do not clearly address the issue in statute.

- In cases where individuals summon medical assistance for an overdose victim but allegedly commit a crime for which protection is not offered, 24 states and the District of Columbia specifically provide that summoning emergency assistance is a mitigating factor to be considered at sentencing. The criminal offenses to which the mitigation may apply varies among states, involving only violations of probation or parole (Ohio), only controlled substance or drug offenses (12 states), any criminal prosecution or offense (10 states and the District of Columbia), and any non-capital felony offense (Florida). The map below provides a visual representation.

Recently proposed legislation	S.B. 1350, 2021-2022 Reg. Sess. (Cal. 2022) (failed passage in committee). As introduced, the bill proposed to make it involuntary manslaughter for an individual to sell, furnish, administer, or give a controlled substance to another person, where the injection, ingestion, inhalation, or absorption of that controlled substance by the person who purchases or receives the controlled substance proximately causes their death. Subsequent amendments to the bill provided that the court must advise a person found guilty of certain controlled substance crimes that if a person dies because of their action, they “can be charged with voluntary manslaughter or murder.”

Substantive amendments to law(s)	June 17, 2014 – Amendment added protections for a person who is the subject of a good faith request for medical assistance in addition to a person who seeks medical assistance for a drug overdose.
Individual(s) eligible for GS protection	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Person who, in good faith and in a timely manner, seeks medical assistance for someone who is experiencing a drug overdose. • Person who is experiencing a drug overdose and, in good faith, seeks medical assistance for himself or herself or is the subject of a good faith request for medical assistance. The law defines the phrases “drug overdose,” “medical assistance,” and “seeks medical assistance.” A “drug overdose” is a condition resulting from the use of a “regulated drug.”
Protection as to controlled substance possession crimes	An eligible person will not be cited, arrested, or prosecuted for a violation of VT. STAT. ANN. tit. 18, §§ 4201 to 4255 (West 2022) (“Possession and Control of Regulated Drugs”).
Protection as to drug paraphernalia crimes	Vermont does not criminalize the possession of drug paraphernalia.
Protection as to other crimes/violations	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • An eligible person will not be cited, arrested, or prosecuted for procuring, possessing, or consuming alcohol by someone under the age of 21 (VT. STAT. ANN. tit. 7, § 656 (West 2022)) or for providing to or enabling consumption of alcohol by someone under the age of 21 (VT. STAT. ANN. tit. 7, § 658(a)-(c) (West 2022)). • An eligible person has protection from: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ Any of the penalties for violation of a protection order; ○ Any sanctions for a violation of a condition of pretrial release, probation, furlough, or parole; or ○ Having property subject to civil forfeiture, except that prima facie contraband will be subject to forfeiture.
Requirement(s) for the protection to apply	Evidence must have been gained as a proximate result of the person’s seeking medical assistance for a drug overdose, being the subject of a good faith request for medical assistance, being at the scene, or being within close proximity to any person at the scene of the drug overdose for which medical assistance was sought.
Exception(s) to protection	The immunity provisions do not preclude prosecution of the person based on evidence obtained from an independent source.
Reporting overdose a mitigating factor in sentencing	Yes.

VERMONT
Offenses subject to mitigation	Any non-protected offense.
Circumstance(s) when mitigation applies	When a person seeks medical assistance for someone who is experiencing a drug overdose.
Other provisions of note	Except in cases of reckless or intentional misconduct, law enforcement will be immune from liability for citing or arresting a person who is later determined to qualify for immunity.
Express DIH or DDRD provision in state law	VT. STAT. ANN. tit. 18, § 4250 (West 2022) (eff. June 4, 2003).
Classification of DIH/DDRDR offense	Felony.
Circumstance(s) when DIH/DRDD applies	If the death of a person results from the selling or dispensing of a regulated drug to the person, and the person's use of the regulated drug is the proximate cause of the death.
Affirmative defense of DIH/DDRDR offense	VT. STAT. ANN. tit. 18, § 4250 (West 2022) is within Chapter 84 of the Vermont Statutes. Thus, a person eligible for Good Samaritan protection under VT. STAT. ANN. tit. 18, § 4254 (West 2022) may not be cited, arrested, or prosecuted under VT. STAT. ANN. tit. 18, § 4250 (West 2022).

ABOUT THE LEGISLATIVE ANALYSIS AND PUBLIC POLICY ASSOCIATION

Based in Washington D.C., and led by and comprised of experienced attorneys, the Legislative Analysis and Public Policy Association is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization whose mission is to conduct legal and legislative research and analysis and draft legislation on effective law and policy in the areas of public safety and health, substance use disorders, and the criminal justice system.

LAPPA produces timely model laws and policies that can be used by national, state, and local public health, public safety, and substance use disorder practitioners who want the latest comprehensive information on law and policy as well as up-to-the-minute comparative analyses, publications, educational brochures, and other tools ranging from podcasts to fact sheets. Examples of topics on which LAPPA has assisted stakeholders include naloxone laws, law enforcement/community engagement, alternatives to incarceration for those with substance use disorders, medication-assisted treatment in correctional settings, and the involuntary commitment and guardianship of individuals with alcohol or substance use disorders.
